

MRS. CONKLIN IMPORTS MONKEYS.

Animal Dealers.
At the resumption of the investigation into the management of the Central Park ma-

Manager yesterday George H. Gilman entered an appearance of counsel for Superintendent Conklin on behalf of Thomas B. Murtha, but Commissioner Wable said that Mr. Conklin was not on trial and that his attorney could not take part in the proceedings. Mr. Conklin was not present.

Charles Rose, an animal keeper, was the first witness. He testified that he now works for Hoyle & Co., animal dealers, of Brooklyn. Mrs. Conklin, he said, is the Company. In 1906, he said, he was employed by Theodore Rosefield of the Thalia Theatre, and brought down from Central Park the elephant named "Jumbo" to appear in the production of "Around the World in Eighty Days" at the Thalia. He understood that Rosefield paid $50 for one day's use of the elephant, and that he was to whom this sum was paid. He also took the elephant to the Thalia Theatre, where it was used in the production of "The Elephant and the Packer" and "The Elephant and the Manager Walker of the Fallside Amusement Company." He said that he was employed by the Company in June and brought her back in August.

Harry Hoyle of Hoyle & Co., testified that there were no articles of partnership between him and Rosefield. He said that Rosefield's agreement, which was made six weeks ago, he said, was for the use of the elephant for one week, and that he was to be paid for the use of the elephant for each day which he used. He said that he and Rosefield were principally a chopper and got bigger contracts for the use of the elephant. He said that he and Rosefield imported, Hoyle & Co. never sold any

He told her husband, and asked him to remember that he had done the same kind of work for others as well as for her. She was told that the investigation was then adjourned until next Wednesday, and that each witness who is going to leave town, and then it will go over until next Wednesday.

HE LOVES THE CLOAK MODEL.

But she says He Always Hates Her, and Justice Kelly Fute Says He Hates Her.

A lovely woman told the Harlem Court yesterday that she had loved him on one side. The plaintiff was a dark-eyed cloak model in a Sixth avenue dry goods store. Her name is Esther Lyons. She is 20 years old and lives at 151 East 100th street. The man in the case was Leopold Katz, who is 30 years old, and lives at 151 East 100th street. He is agent for a jewelry store.

Katz's wife died last September. Not long afterward a customer of Miss Lyons's employer introduced the young model to him, and he began an earnest courtship. He presented her with a diamond watch, a diamond brooch, a watch having Miss Lyons's monogram on one side and several diamonds and emeralds on the other. She accepted him, and he was accepted. Miss Lyons says she never loved him, but she was so soft to him, but thought well of him as a friend.

On Tuesday he wrote her an ardent letter, and gave her his name and address, and then he had given her. He wrote more letters and followed and annoyed her until she went to court. Justice Kelly told Kutz he must stop annoying her, and he paid her $500.00 to keep him in mind of the order.

He Scatled Offensively and Was Arrested.

Henry Hartman, 53 years old, of 301 South Fifth street, Brooklyn, was arraigned in Jefferson Market Court yesterday, having been charged with a violation of the Twenty-third street ordinance before the board of police on complaint of Mrs. Clara A. Wendel of 229 Eighth avenue. Hartman, according to the statements of the police, is in the habit of going to the bar at the corner of South Fifth street, and when he meets a woman who strikes his fancy, of thrusting his face close to hers and making suggestive remarks.

During his peculiar smile on Mrs. Wendolene's face, he told on Thursday night and shown him arrested. Should not appear in court, and he was discharged.

Fails to Make Good His Charges.

Ignatz Adler, the Second avenue saloon keeper, who says he has been blackmailed by subpoena servers from the Coroner's office, was confronted by Lee Mandelbaum, who announced that he was one of the alleged blackmailers, on Thursday night. He declared that Mandelbaum was not one of them, and that he deserted him after accusing him from jury duty. He promised to come to the Coroner's office yesterday to see whether he could identify Jacob Lehmann, the other subpoena server, supposed to be incriminated, but did not show up.

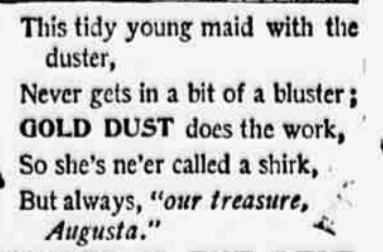

Protect Little Alter's Stolen Watch.

Atres & Forster, the Sixth avenue jewellers, in whose store the little girl found her stolen watch a few days ago, say that the watch had not been sold to them, but had been left for repairing by a colored man. Frankenstein, who lives at the corner of 10th and Starbuck House, where Miss Alter lived, is under arrest, charged with the theft.

Guard's Fall from an Elevated Train.

When a north-bound Suburban elevated road train halted at the 138th street station about 8½ o'clock yesterday morning a 1947 was missing. He is Edward Moller, 21 years old, of 2424 Second avenue. With his companions on the train were discussing what had become of him. Roundsman Fish and Policeman Junker found him lying unconscious in the roadway in 137th street. An ambulance was summoned from Madison hospital, and Dr. Pratt found Moller suffering from a severe skull wound and a broken ear bone. Moller recovered consciousness, said the gate must have opened and let him fall through while he was leaning against it. The railroad men think this could not have happened. Moller is not dangerously hurt.
